

ABSTRACT

Methods and systems are described for generating reports in a communication network. More specifically, the system processes a communication at an enterprise gatekeeper; stores, in memory accessible to the enterprise gatekeeper, information associated with the communication; parses the information associated with the communication; and provides an indication of the parsed information.